At a time of profound global shifts, an efficient and effective regulatory framework is essential for European competitiveness. Simpler, better-designed, and easier-to-implement rules will therefore help to unlock economic potential and promote a more dynamic and integrated Single Market.

The Commission identified five areas of action:

Simplicity by design: Ensuring clarity with every EU proposal which must be easy to understand, apply and enforce.

Strengthening the better regulation framework: New initiatives will be further improved to enhance transparency and efficiency.

Regulatory deep cleaning by puting its large stock of existing legislation in order.

Tackling regulatory gold-plating: Unnecessary complexity and barriers to the Single Market should be identified and modified.

Faster, robust enforcement of the Single Market rulebook in selected policy areas.
